Participation is a slow and unpredictable process.

Participative process and cooperation with the community unfolds at its own pace. Be sure you are not in a hurry.

It's fairly difficult to start a community.

But perhaps you can find an existing one and work with them?

That's the best way to build community that outlives the project.

People like to work on things they feel strongly about.
With people they like.

Communities thrive when they designed the project they take part in. Community works best when the members like to cooperate with each other.

Nobody likes long meetings and administration.

People are often willing, in fact more than willing, to give a whole weekend to hands-on work, but much less willing to attend meetings or deal with administration.

Therefore: minimise administrative demands and create opportunities for quick, visible results.

We support small local actions.

Do you have an idea that you could do in your local park, yard or some other outdoor place in Ljubljana?
Like setting up a football goal?

Perhaps a picnic with a few neighbours, a garage sale or movie screening? Perhaps a community garden? Or a cleaning action?
